About the Activity

Objectives

To understanding, analyze , interpret the role of information technology in the modern, and dynamic supply chain management space.

To create awareness on the growing and increasing dependent mantle of information technology in supply chain management..

A Guest Lecture on "Role of IT in Supply Chain Management" on 27 January 2021 through the platform Google Meet.

The lecture featured an eminent speaker, Dr. Rupali Memane

The lecture was attended by 72 students of Second Year BBA(IB)

The program commenced with a brief introduction of the resource person by Coordinator of BBA/BBA(IB) Mrs Deepa Sujith.

And vote of thanks was proposed by

The session began with the definition and the difference between Supply Chain Management and Logistics Management. As explained by the resource person the primary difference between Supply Chain Management and Logistics is that Supply Chain Management is the coordination and management (movement) of supply chains of an organization. Whereas, Logistics Management is a process of integration and maintenance (flow and storage) of goods in an organization.

Dr. Memane went on to explain the components of the supply chain, namely, planning, sourcing, inventory, production & transportation, and return of goods. Having deciphered the basics of Supply Chain Management, the speaker went on to explain the role of Information Technology in Supply Chain Management.

According to her, IT provides the tools which can pick up relevant information, break it down for proper analysis and execute it for optimum performance of the supply chain. Data is pivotal to the execution of the supply chain, primarily because it provides the base on which the supply chain managers can take decisions. Realtime or almost real-time information is the key to proper supply chain management. With information about the various stages of the supply chain, decision-makers can plan, manage, and adjust processes to achieve goals in procurement, inventory, manufacturing, etc.

She further shed light on the importance of IT in the field of Supply Chain Management.

According to her business processes have been digitalized in the past couple of decades, and it has become a necessity rather than an option. Why not? IT integrates various operations carried out by different companies in the supply chain. It speeds up the business processes and prevents bottlenecks. Companies are closer to achieving on-time procurement, shorter inventory, and better efficiency, especially in manufacturing. IT allows companies in the supply chain to meet the needs of consumers.

Dr. Memane further explained how suppliers can utilize Information Technology. She opined that The supply chain starts with the supplies. With a reliable supply chain software that allows real-time information sharing, manufacturers and suppliers can collaborate better and avoid production delays due to insufficient raw materials. For manufacturers, IT offers better visibility and transparency that lead to better accountability and control over the production of goods. Manufacturers that have clear visibility on production can make adjustments to make the process more efficient as well as foresee problems and prevent them. In terms of shippers, IT ensure customer satisfaction by improving order tracking and delivery. Distributors can benefit from IT by proper allocation of time and money with regard to predicting demands and effectively managing inventory and orders. Last but not least retailers are the ones who face consumers. They need flexibility and visibility as well as integration. They can integrate their POS systems, which capture their sales, with their tool for monitoring the stock level, which is also visible to the distributor. Conclusion The secret behind successful Supply Chain Management lies in IT. From the very beginning of the supply chain to its very end, data plays a key role in bringing the entire set together. IT tools provide the necessary communication link between all entities and allow them to work independently and yet in a coordinated manner. The role of IT in supply chain management is undeniable. It is the chain that binds everyone and everything together. The session was a huge success. It enabled the student to discuss and understand vital aspects of IT with regard to SCM.
